Luther strengthens its antitrust practice in Munich

Dr Sebastian Janka will move from Noerr to Luther on 1st of July 2019 as a Partner and will head up the Munich antitrust team. With this move, Luther is creating a third location for antitrust law.

Dr Sebastian Janka, a nationally and internationally renowned antitrust law expert, focuses on all aspects of German and European antitrust law, in particular, national and international transactional antitrust law, as well as antitrust proceedings, dawn raids, compliance and internal investigations.

Sebastian Janka strengthens Luther's already strong Compliance Practice Group. "I am delighted to become part of the dynamic antitrust team and help shape the Munich office. At Luther, I can further develop the market position and the international profile both for myself and for the firm," said Janka. Luther is one of the few law firms in Munich that are in a position to offer the core disciplines of compliance advice – white-collar crime and antitrust law – from a single source. "With Sebastian Janka, we have gained a colleague who is already very well positioned in the market. As part of the further strategic expansion of our office, we want to attract additional colleagues with a similar positioning in other specialist areas", explained Dr. André Große Vorholt, Location Head of the Munich office.

Anne Wegner, Head of Antitrust Law at Luther, is pleased to have found the right partner in Dr Sebastian Janka to join and develop the team in Munich. "We already know Dr Janka very well from joint mandates and are absolutely convinced of his capabilities. Our antitrust practices in Dusseldorf and Brussels have been established for a long time with our clients and from these offices have also advised in the Munich market." Anne Wegner is confident that "building up another team in the south of Germany will not only increase our efficiency in major projects and especially in internal investigations, but will also be highly appreciated by our clients on site".
